FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

If I pay the application fees for my application to go before the Municipal Planning Commission (MPC), will it be approved?

Payment of fees does not guarantee that the application will be approved. The MPC carefully reviews each application and takes into account specific considerations when making decisions. These considerations involve whether or not the applicant may be caused undue hardship to bring the property or structure into compliance with the current Land Use Bylaw, and considers unique circumstances about the property to warrant a variance of the Bylaw requirements.

What if I already opened a business or started my project?

If you have started your project, or opened, before a permit has been issued, permit fees will be doubled, and doesn't guarantee approval.
